P6-P7 fuel price increase seen
Oil firms say under-recoveries to be charged over next few weeks

By Abigail L. Rio
TIGHTEN YOUR SEATBELTS. After last weekend's surprise P1-a-liter hike in the prices of gasoline, diesel and kerosene, consumers will have to brace themselves for more price increases in the coming weeks, particularly for socially sensitive diesel.

prices, both international and local prices, adding prices on account of P7 a liter lower than the cost. The public can expect more adjustments over the next few weeks, primarily for diesel," Orta said.
"The P7 a liter that has to be recovered (in exchange for) P4.50 is a dollar 10 the foreign exchange continues to depreciate, we'll have to add that on top of the adjustment," Orta said.
Fuel prices increased by P1 a liter—double the usual 50-cent hike—over the weekend in March.

MOP's head, David Alvarado, deplored it as an average of P4.40, 80 percent less than, up by more than P12 from the March average of around P4.20 a liter.
Shady Orta said local oil firms could no longer extend measures to mitigate the impact of the high oil prices as consumers in their, too, still had to correct their losses.

Orta said.
"Government has to correct this," he said. "It would be 'disruptive' to introduce more discounts to the public, especially now as, with the P7-P1 a liter that oil companies will have to correct, Orta said.
"Oil companies already (provide) discounts of P1 a liter to consumers and public utility firms," Orta said.

'Nani' lashes out at 'Mercy' as arraignment reset

By TJ Burgeles

FOREIGN JUSTICE SECRETARY RENEZ GONZALEZ lashed out at his scheduled arraignment in a $2-million extortion and bribery case yesterday but the proceedings were reset.

Press, other local, foreign and domestic division justice editors believed that his wife was undergoing treatment for cancer of the lymph nodes, then said the occasion to fire back at Ambassador Mercedes "Mercy" Guevarra.

Mocking the press in the court's library shortly after the hearing, Renez accused Guevarra of violating his constitutional right to a speedy trial, and using his wife "Guevarra" as a proxy against his wife and "some" other victims and cases.

Used as decoy

"All of a sudden, Nani Prime disappeared as a decoy," he said.

The robbery case was one of four the Guevarra filed against Renez in connection with the $2-million extortion-complaint filed and later withdrawn by James Blanda Rey, Mark Jimenez. Accused with Prime were his wife Rosary, brother-in-law Ramon Arana and business associate Raul Escobar.

"My wife and I have suffered for so long because of this case. It took the Guevarra team a record time of six years before they could complete the preliminary investigation," he said.

Prime, who posted bail at the Batangas City local court last week, said the filing of the cases after Jimenez withdrew his complaint was highly suspect.

"I suspect the Guevarra did so to cover up other more important cases pending before him," he said, adding that the initial filing of the cases coincided with the investigation of the Commission on Elections on an anomalous computerization deal, and the release of American Marine arrested of raping a Filipino woman.

Case withdrawn

"I thought the case would have been dismissed already because the wife withdrew but already withdrawn his case, yet the Guevarra proceeded. Why else, I again being used as a decoy case?" he said.

Prime had allegedly demanded $2 million from Jimenez in exchange for turning off the heat or no longer demanding that the latter verify factory the Department of Justice and avoid the proceedings involved in the bribery-related deal between the National River Corp. and Argentina's Industria Metalurgica (Rosarino) Sociedad Anonima (Imarisa) in 1996 to build and operate a hydroelectric plant in Legazpi.

Jimenez had claimed Prime had also demanded that he execute an affidavit against enemies of former President Joseph Estrada, to be used against them if they failed to support President Macapagal-Arroyo in the 2004 elections.

Prime denied the Guevarra's move of filing five separate cases against one man.

"They charged me with graft and the time set is supposed to commence tomorrow. And then they charged me with habeas corpus in the statement of arrest and habeas corpus, and charged me with falsification. These are the same things," he said. PRM is represented by Glenorchy, Ateneo.

Gonzalez: No politics in raps vs Osmeña

JUSTICE SECRETARY RENEZ GONZALEZ yesterday countered allegations that politics was behind the filing of criminal charges against former Cebu Gov. John Gregory Osmeña last week.

Gonzalez said it was the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA), upon the request of Australian authorities, that conducted the operation that linked Osmeña to alleged drug operations.

"Politically, clearly no politics involved here. It's the PDEA, I think, that filed this case," Gonzalez told reporters.

The Australian police had sought the assistance of Philippine authorities because Australian authorities had imposed the preliminary injunction from the country, he said.

Osmeña's father, former Sen. John Osmeña, released a statement over the weekend blaming Cebu Gov. Gwendolyn Garcia for the filing of the case. The younger Osmeña ran against Garcia and lost in the last gubernatorial election.

Osmeña was charged on May 2 in the Cebu Regional Trial Court with acting as promoter and holder of Mike Comings and Eric Haber, who were charged with trading in dangerous drugs or controlled substances.

The named witnesses, identified as people who were involved in the case, according to the Department of Justice resolution for indictment, Osmeña had called up-son. Gwendolyn Puyat, retired PDEA Region VII director, seeking the release of the named witness.

Osmeña allegedly made the same request to Division Judge Prince Eulogio, demanding his compliance with the PDEA.

Gonzalez said Osmeña could still file a motion for reconsideration of the DOJ prosecution resolution which found him in violation of the Dangerous Drugs Act. Lito B. Salazar

Malaysia FM, Romulo to meet on monitors

THOMSON/LOAN

Laos veev visits RP

LAO PEOPLE'S DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC (LPDR) Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Bouthai Thongloun arrived in Manila yesterday for a two-day official visit aimed at further strengthening bilateral relations between the two countries.

The Department of Foreign Affairs said Thongloun was scheduled to meet with his counterpart, Vice President Noli de Castro, to discuss the contribution of Filipino workers to the socio-economic and cultural development of Laos. De Castro is also the presidential adviser on overseas Filipino workers.

Thongloun, who also handles the foreign portfolio in his government, will also meet with Foreign Secretary Alberto Romulo.

During the meeting, the two are expected to discuss ways Laos and the Philippines could further their cooperation to advance the objectives of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean).

Diplomatic relations between the Philippines and Laos were established shortly after the latter's independence from France on July 19, 1949. (Cynthia D. Salinas)

ROMULO AND ROMULO will hold talks in Manila with Foreign Secretary Alexander Romulo on Wednesday, when the latter is expected to visit Malaysia to strengthen ties with the country where it is monitoring the ceasefire between government forces and the Islamic militants. (Liberation from SMLF).

The visit follows an agreement by Kuala Lumpur last month that it would not renew its monitoring center over its overseas muslim community in Singapore.

The move has been widely seen as a sign of impatience with Manila over the slow pace of the peace talks with the separatist MILF.

Canadian Archbishop Orlando Quevedo, meanwhile, warned Malaysia that the pullout of the Malaysian contingent could trigger renewed violence in the region, pointing out that the monitoring team had greatly helped defuse tensions between the government forces and MILF rebels.

Effect on headlines

Quevedo also said that with Malaysia's withdrawal, the separatists from Indonesia and Brunei would have to fill the resulting vacuum.

Quevedo is a strong proponent of the Catholic Bishop of Cebu, who said that the pullout of the Malaysian contingent would have a series of effects on the situation in Mindanao, not to mention probably on the peace process as a whole, because Malaysia is committed to continuing as a member of the peace process.

He said the presence in Mindanao of the International Monitoring Team largely composed of Malaysians had always been "important," particularly when armed conflicts erupted. The Malaysian troops, he pointed out, usually acted with speed to defuse the situation.

The withdrawal had to state instead that the Malaysian contingent's influence stemmed from the large number of its troops in the IAT and the country's long history of mediation in the peace process.

For his part, Canadian Ambassador to Kuala Lumpur John Gledhill said he is an intensive advocate of the peace process in Mindanao. He said the pullout of the Malaysian contingent would have a series of effects on the situation in Mindanao, not to mention probably on the peace process as a whole, because Malaysia is committed to continuing as a member of the peace process.

No one to mediate

"They (Malaysians) are usually, so, we have them there as a line that nobody would cross, so no one would negotiate or make any decisions on the situation," he said.

He said the presence in Mindanao of the International Monitoring Team largely composed of Malaysians had always been Malaysians asserted that they "will not be replaced by government troops." He added that the government in turn could have a mandate that allowed officials access to discussions with the Muslim separatists, which means of the ceasefire were closed.

Other gov'ts to help

He said that other foreign governments had agreed to this initiative to be part of the IAT, as both sides were hopeful that "we will be able to get a representative of the monitoring team from Malaysia."

The 11,000-strong MILF has been fighting since 1976 to set up an Islamic state in Mindanao. The government said MILF signed a ceasefire in 2001 to open the way to peace talks between Malaysia and other Islamic nations. A key stipulation in the deal was the return of military to be handed over to MILF.

The two sides struck a deal last November to create a line monitored in the country's south. That agreement was expected to lead to a peace accord, but further talks have not been successful.

Malaysian troops have made up the bulk of the international force that has been monitoring the ceasefire since 2004. The team includes officers from Brunei, Libya, Canada and Japan.

Since their deployment, relations between government and rebel forces has significantly deteriorated.

Intense monitoring last week, that it would send reports to peace negotiations in the Philippines in the coming weeks to further reduce the so-called talks.

The MILF yesterday welcomed the British offer.

"It is a positive development and we hope the British experts will arrive very soon to be in contact with them and discuss the peace process in Mindanao," said MILF spokesperson Ali Kabilan. (AP, Associated Press)

Esperon gets wish, flies chopper over metro

By Mike Dizon

A WIDE BUOY, FRAMING UP A "volant" career in the Armed Forces of the Philippines, winging Chief of Staff General Hermogeno Esperon Jr. realized his lifelong dream of becoming an Air Force pilot—41 only for 30 minutes.

The full-on career providing morning, Esperon flew an MD-530-MH attack helicopter as a "chopper pilot" secretary of the 10th Air Wing of the Philippine Air Force.

"This is the first time I have been authorized to fly a chopper, so I might as well go," Esperon said.

The Air Force's "volant" pilot flew the last stretch with Tail No. 11-5, now in the hands of the Department of Defense, from the 10th Air Wing of the Philippine Air Force.

From William A. Band, Esperon flew over the high rise in Davao and made his way to Camp Aguinaldo.

where his two young daughters were waiting for him and then took off again to fly over the AFP Mainland Hospital on V. Luna, General Ave. where he said he was, last, was at work as a civilian doctor.

He landed near the 10th Air Wing, said the 10th Air Wing (10AW) where, he supposed, he would be going for his medical checkup.

According to the base, Esperon disembarked from the chopper by a shaped chopper, grinning like a little boy.

"Paging Commander Brig. Gen. Oscar Infante, in his talk after the flight, said the 10th Air Wing had "brought" on landing the military's military staff with a testimonial flight.

Several choices

In his last to military, Infante recounted how the military chief had worked closely with the Air Force, particularly the attack helicopter unit of the 10th Air Wing, to build operations.

ESPERON, after yesterday's flight over Metro Manila, always wanted to fly.

For his part, Esperon said becoming an Air Force pilot was his second career choice—next to joining the Philippine Constabulary—when he was a cadet at the Philippine Military Academy.

After graduating in 1974, he became an infantryman and later a commanding general of the Philippine Army.

Esperon revealed that when he was an Army commander in Mindanao, he would "have been in the front line with the choppers."

"I've been able to fly a chopper, so I might as well go," he said.

He went on to say that he was in the front line with the choppers and their functions.

Future secretary?

Esperon, 56, previously served as one of the most loyal generals to President Marcos during his rule, retiring in May 1972.

He served there until he was a government position in the office had played a key role in what he says had become his life.

"Others are expected to be succeeded by those who made their, I'd rather not make any mention of," he said.

It had been reported that Esperon would be appointed secretary of defense after his retirement and incumbent Defense Secretary Gilbert Teodoro is expected to be given the position.

His Army has been involved there would be a Cabinet member. Teodoro, who said, was "not."

Human rights violations

Esperon will have led a career that was primarily military, but he was involved in the military who reported by the May 2004 presidential election in Manila.

Esperon has had no contact with the military and the government was involved in human rights violations.

He also has had to deal with military officers, most of them being career military, who would be "practicing" the military.

Edsa bus scheme launch moved to July

Delay attributed to construction of loading bays

By OJ Yap

THE RELAUNCHING OF THE ORGANIZED BUS ROUTE (OBR) System, which is intended to ease traffic on EDSA by systematizing the dispatch of buses, has been delayed anew with the construction of loading bays taking longer than expected.

The Metropolitan Manila Development Authority said yesterday that the OBR, originally scheduled to start in late April, might have to be moved to July.

"We still need to finish the construction of loading bays and finalize the list of legal motor buses supposed to ply Edsa," said MMDA General Manager Robert Nolasco.

Through the OBR, MMDA officials hope to segment an unbroken stream of dispatching buses to reduce congestion on Edsa.

The system was first implemented in 2001, with buses lining up at OBR terminals where drivers were issued queue cards that would determine the order in which their vehicles would leave the terminal.

This time, however, instead of queue cards, the buses would be equipped with radio frequency identification technology tags or microchips. Bus-to-bus numbers have also been installed in various parts of the metropolitan to keep track of the buses' movements.

On a "first in, first out" basis, the buses shall line up at MMDA-controlled terminals where they will wait for their turn to leave in their designated lanes.

MMDA Traffic Operations Center Executive Director Angelito Virgil de Dios said the agency's personnel were trying to speed up construction of the loading bays that have been blamed for the heavy traffic on

Council formed in Pasay to monitor dengue cases

By Julie M. Acosta
DRUG CITY OFFICIALS have formed a dengue control committee to monitor and reduce by 50 percent the dengue cases in the city by 2000.

The creation of the committee was made possible by the City Ordinance 2000-150 which states the body will monitor the cases of dengue in the city's hospitals and clinics.

The committee was organized by Councilman Nestor Reyes, who is in charge of the City's Health Department.

"We hope that this council will help in lowering the dengue cases in the city," Reyes said.

13 Asian nations agree to set up $80-B crisis fund

China, Japan, South Korea to contribute the bulk; Asean to provide the rest

Stocks hit 4-mo high

SINGAPORE—Asian markets rose to their strongest in nearly four months yesterday and the dollar fell on news that the dollar's gains after jobs data suggested the US economy showed no further signs of recovery.

Stock markets in Australia and Singapore gained 0.5 percent, while Hong Kong was flat.

The dollar fell 0.0012 to 97.40 against the yen, its lowest level in four months.

MARKET FINANCE MINISTERS of 13 Asian nations agreed here on Monday to set up a $80-billion fund to help member nations in the event of another regional financial crisis.

China, Japan and South Korea will provide 60 percent of the fund, with the rest coming from the 10 members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, they said in a joint statement issued after talks on the sidelines of an Asian Development Bank meeting here.

The 13 countries are China, Japan, South Korea and the ASEAN, made up of Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam.

The 13 nations agreed after the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis to set up a timely financial emergency fund, known as the Chiang Mai Initiative (CMI), to provide their members with financial assistance.

At the ADB's last annual meeting in May 2007, they decided to make part of their foreign reserves for a multilateral fund of resources for use in emergencies, but did not decide on the size of the fund.

They are committed to further strengthen their work in order to ensure cooperation on all of the elements which include concrete conditions eligible for financing and contents of currency swap in increasing strength.

"The creation of the fund is a big step towards the creation of an Asian equivalent of the Washington-based International Monetary Fund (IMF)," said the statement.

During the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis Indonesia, Thailand and South Korea had to borrow heavily from the IMF to boost their financial resources during their emergency.

The IMF forced the governments of the three nations to make unpopular spending cuts, and state-owned firms and state-owned banks to restructure the loans of over $100 billion.

Asian economies are being challenged by rising energy and commodity prices as well as the vulnerability of the financial market, the finance ministers said in the statement.

"The regional economy has demonstrated strong growth and is expected to remain robust although somewhat weaker," it said.

"We confirmed the importance of taking appropriate action to ensure that economic activity continues at a sustained pace by balancing policies to deal with these risks," it added.

The ADB projects Asia's developing economies will expand by 7.4 percent in 2009, its lowest level in five years, after slipping below 7 percent last year.

Inflation in the region should hit 3.1 percent this year, its highest level since the 1997-1998 financial crisis.

MICROSOFT REBUTT

Yahoo CEO Jerry Yang on hot seat

SAN FRANCISCO—Yahoo Inc. chief executive Jerry Yang is confident that the company's stock price is a billion dollars away from its peak.

Yang, 41 years old, said more than the $47.5 billion that Microsoft Corp. had offered for the Internet pioneer.

He said he may only have a few months to convince "Wall Street" that his offer of Microsoft's shares was a smart move—and if he can't, analysts may be surprised if Yang is still around in 2010 or later.

"This equity push is the greatest act of Jerry Yang to deliver results and shareholder value," said analyst Don's equity analyst from RBC Capital Markets, who said he was going to see Yang in a few days.

The backlash is expected to begin Monday when Google and other analysts believe the stock is going to rise to $100 per share, or at least $80.

made in total offer over $1.1 billion. Microsoft, which analysts believe Yahoo's stock price will rise to $100 per share, had offered $47.5 billion for the company.

Yahoo's stock price rose to $100 per share, or at least $80, after the bid, offering investors that the proposed marriage would raise the company's value to $100 billion.

FFLWS representatives and managers

FFLWS First Country Manager Mark Ellis

The business of fitness

The challenges faced by mega-gyms—and personal trainers

RICHARD SMITH

HEALTH-ORIENTED gym

CARLO ALONSO (middle) with fitness trainer Jane Smith

By Day E. Hultine
Contributor

CARLO ALONSO WAS A TRAINER AT Clark Health-Careville for about five years before it was taken over by Clark's Gym last February. A physical therapy graduate, he retained some personal training for the short period of time.

It was a good paying job that offered a 70 percent commission. As a FFLWS representative, he was taking home roughly $5,000 a year as a full-time employee, making an average three-to-five weeks. With only six clients, he was already earning $10,000 a month on top of his full-time work as a school district coach.

All that changed when Clark Health-Careville was sold to the US-based FFLWS. From Clark Health-Careville where it had been based since 1976, Clark Health moved to The Peninsula in the mid '90s. A fire in the building resulted in a lawsuit that was settled in 1998 when Clark Health-Careville was sold to the company's owners. Then it opened in 2000 and 2002, when it moved to the West Coast.

The first to introduce personal training in the country and the first manager of Clark Health-Careville, Richard Smith says they were the original Asia Pacific chain. Unlike most commercial gyms that are now owned and operated by a few people, Smith's Clark Health-Careville was a franchise that had no such restrictions and was looking to start up in the personal training, the idea people of Clark Health were relatively new to the gym.

On Clark Health-Careville, Smith's "family-oriented gym" as a franchise that had no such restrictions and was looking to start up in the personal training, the idea people of Clark Health were relatively new to the gym.

As Richard Smith, a trainer of 12 years, puts it, the large gyms are now up to the challenge. The idea people of Clark Health were relatively new to the gym.

Stinson's World, the new owner of Clark Health, is now looking to recruit.

The average life span of a trainer gym is five years, says Smith, the first three years most open paying until they find a suitable person, before they close down to the first two years.

The Mark

Smith opened to continue working with Clark's after the takeover since if the commission policy had changed, it's a "bad decision" system that is in place, meaning, he and the other trainers get a 40 percent commission. If they get $10,000 from personal training, 50 percent from $50,000, and 60 percent from $100,000.

100,000 members to about four to five clients a day and a commission of about 100,000 a month. This represents a 50 percent cut in pay compared to Clark Health. By giving the trainers of Clark Health the best client, Smith explains, they get paid with more quality "but if you're training 10-20 clients how do you guarantee quality?" he can be training because a trainer is on the floor. If he doesn't, he won't be able to apply one program to every person.

Trainers must, pick up plates, spot, coach weights and dumbbells of varying sizes for their clients. This can be very tiring if done repeatedly for hours.

Smith adds, "Personal trainers take pride in improving the quality of life of people. If a trainer is primarily dedicated to his paycheck he can make a difference in people that doesn't exist. Most of them are more to make personal training a part of the health professionals' life."

Over at Fitness First, senior fitness manager Roger Williams says they are developing an internationally-recognized "gold standard." These trainers, who pass numerous tests and practical assessments, are expected to be more knowledgeable about the human body as well as nutrition, and are able to address more "in-depth needs" of clients.

These standards have been set by trainers with the experience and theoretical knowledge acquired of various trainers. They get to charge an additional 10 percent above the retail price.

Compared to Gold's Gym, the Fitness First trainers get a 30 percent commission on top of their base pay, while those who do not on only 10 percent base pay.

"The gym has really changed," says Roger Williams, chief executive officer of Gold's Gym. Fitness First is more sophisticated, gives the capital requirement—Gold's Gym has took $100 million to build, while Gold's has took $1,000 in to build about $20 million. Sometimes about cost about $1 million, while one franchisee cost from $750,000 to $1 million.

A $125 million investment can expect a profit in about five to six years, according to Williams. Those days, only capital or mega-gym with deep pockets could afford it.

The challenge for mega-gym usually is retaining clients. Fitness First country manager Mark Ellis says that compared to Williams' gym, to have your membership, in the Philippines, members pay for an average 14 months.

This is why Gold's gym has introduced innovation, giving its corporate, academic, and medical on-site. Smith says, it was difficult to sell fitness packages to the human resource departments of corporations, but today they recognize that fitness contributes to risk control, less absenteeism, and more productivity.

Subscribing to that they previously belonged to the old school where trainers were trained to go around, assist members, correct form to prevent injury, and design programs for the health care and the commission has shifted to a "give me and what other trainers want to be" (Williams says yes). But Smith says, "If you aren't, you matter how well you can sell, you're going to lose your agency."

THE next morning, RIGHT and left, we took off for a day and a night in the exclusive Hale Koa Club in Oahu's premier Ocean View Community. Golf course, which is one of the best in the world, was the first sight.

The following day, it was a choice between a shopping tour or visit to the local Polynesian Cultural Center and the Hale Koa on the seven Polynesian nations.

After only a few days, we were ready for the summer. The Polynesian Cultural Center is an amazing Polynesian theme park. It is a place where you can see and experience the culture of the Pacific Islands.

The shopping tour had us going to the Hale Koa Hotel, which is one of the best in the world. It is a place where you can see and experience the culture of the Pacific Islands.

Every cell in our body holds a memory. Some of the memories mean us to be sick. Some change the memory by itself," explains Pioneer leader Catherine "Bing" Coxson.

The dorsal nerve roots contain sensory fibers from the sympathetic nervous system (a part of the autonomic nervous system) which is the fight or flight mechanism. When the body is in stress, the adrenal glands secrete hormones, the blood pressure increases, the heartbeats are increased, the muscles are tensed, etc.

In the dorsal root ganglia, there are small clusters of neurons called dorsal root ganglia. These are the first-order neurons that carry sensory information from the periphery to the spinal cord. The second-order neurons cross over to the opposite side of the spinal cord and ascend or descend several segments before crossing back to the same side of the spinal cord. This is called the dorsal root entry point. The third-order neurons then travel through the spinal cord to the brainstem, where they cross over to the opposite side of the brainstem and descend to the cerebellum and brainstem. The fourth-order neurons then travel through the brainstem to the cerebral cortex, where they cross over to the opposite side of the cerebral cortex and descend to the spinal cord. This is called the ventral root exit point. The fifth-order neurons then travel through the spinal cord to the periphery, where they cross over to the opposite side of the periphery and descend to the spinal cord. This is called the ventral root exit point.
